EARLIER LINKS: EVIDENCE MATTERS

Nen-related tradition → Iizasa is possible school influence from cited transmission texts, not proof of personal instruction by Nen’ami Jion.

Iizasa → Yasumoto / Matsumoto remains provisional; generations and dates disagree. No direct Iizasa → Hayashizaki arrow is claimed.

Bokuden → Hayashizaki is explicit later school testimony. Higashine is reported as an early teacher; his own teachers remain unidentified.

READING ONE CONNECTED DIAGRAM

This first sheet follows the principal Kensei route continuously. The following sheets retain wider pupils, alternate Tosa sequences, regional branches and modern student networks.

The familiar early succession is a traditional genealogy. Each arrow does not establish an independently verified licence or sole successor.

Blue arrows preserve school testimony; amber dashed arrows remain uncertain. Club membership at the bottom uses a dotted affiliation line.

RESEARCH COVERAGE

134 entries and 197 relationship records are in the full atlas.

57 proposals from both research folders have an explicit disposition.

The source register contains 95 records, including historical research leads and practitioner updates.

Unresolved names remain research leads. Literature, anonymous posts and uninspected originals do not become proven teachers.

Hayashizaki Musō-ryū explicitly attributes instruction to Bokuden. Bokuden’s school names his biological father Urabe and adoptive father Tsukahara as teachers. See sheets 1 and 5 for the proposed Iizasa route and disputed generations. No teacher of Higashine was identified.

Ōno and Hayashizaki occur in a Kurama-ryū genealogy; that context is not asserted as direct teaching. Iizasa Chōisai is excluded as a direct teacher because the dates conflict.

Tamiya Yahei Nobumasa
田宮彌兵衛信正

Enomoto’s 1994 study proposes that the conventional Arai entry corresponds to Kosuge Seitetsusai Masatsugu. It separates iai attributed to Tamiya Yahei from yawara attributed to Hasegawa.

Tamiya Yahei → Arai/Kosuge is an attributed interpretation. Yahei is not merged with Tamiya Heibei. The detailed traditional spine on sheet 2 remains visible, with this disagreement recorded in the atlas and report.

Konno also participated in the Turku visit. Being an examiner is not evidence of teaching every candidate. Michioka’s death year remains disputed: Kensei says 1997; a Swedish retrospective contains both 1995 and 1997.

READ THESE ROUTES WITH THEIR LIMITS

Nen-related tradition is a textual research lead, not proof that Nen’ami Jion personally taught Iizasa.

Iizasa’s death in 1488 excludes a direct lesson to Hayashizaki (putative birth c. 1542).

Some accounts insert Yasushige or differ over Matsumoto. No verified unbroken chain is asserted.

02 BOKUDEN’S OTHER REPORTED PUPILS

Ibaraki’s heritage account names six further pupils. They provide swordsmanship context; they are not all ancestors in Kensei’s iai succession.
