KENSEI KENSAN KAI

Lineage research and evidence register

Revised 3 November 2026

134 entries · 197 relationship records · 95 sources

A companion to the interactive English–Japanese atlas and the five-sheet light and dark posters.

Reading this edition

The first section explains the new findings and their limits. The entry register then records the current cards, followed by every relationship and the source catalogue. Source codes are clickable throughout.

Teaching, traditional succession, family relationships, institutional roles and occasional contact are different claims. They are not interchangeable. A date in a catalogue or a modern school narrative is not independent authentication of an original licence.

The existing Swedish practitioner corrections remain attributed to their contributors. New historical claims are attributed to the specific scholarship or tradition that supports them.

Access and independence

Morimoto’s abstract and expanded article are by one researcher, not independent witnesses. The Japanese text governs the Shimamura identification because the English abstract has an apparent naming error. Original diaries and private scrolls were not authenticated. Unread bibliographic records remain research leads.

Sources: S54 · S55 · S56 · S57 · S59

Public research was reviewed in Japanese and other languages. No claim is made to have exhausted private archives, closed groups, all historical books or every martial-arts school.

01 / Findings and interpretation

Can we trace teachers before Hayashizaki?

Hayashizaki Musō-ryū explicitly names Bokuden’s instruction. Bokuden’s school names Urabe and Yasumoto. A provisional summary connects Yasumoto with Iizasa, but conflicting generations and chronological errors prevent calling this a verified unbroken chain. No secure teacher of Higashine was found.

Sources: S71 · S51 · S72 · S73

What do Shimamura’s diaries change?

The published study supports instruction from both Tsubouchi and Yamakawa, contact with Emori, and identifies Hosokawa as Shimamura’s son. These relationships coexist with the differing serial school tables; family and contact arrows remain separate from teaching.

Sources: S54 · S55

Does the conventional early sequence tell the whole story?

Enomoto’s North Shinano study proposes a different Arai/Kosuge and iai/yawara reconstruction. Hirosaki’s catalogue preserves differing collateral sequences. They are presented as attributed alternatives, without silently rewriting every school’s genealogy.

Sources: S53 · S57

Which manuscripts still need direct examination?

The Iwami scrolls, the cited private 1621 and 1860 objects, and the Hosokawa diaries were not physically authenticated. Library bibliographies, Tanaka’s article records and the Tsukioka archive are concrete next research leads; unread works do not create new proven arrows.

Sources: S56 · S57 · S59 · S61 · S62 · S63 · S64 · S67

Why does the early line look so straight?

The familiar sequence selects one succession route. The Shōnai Sakai line, Shinano account, regional Tamiya traditions and Suiō-ryū testimony preserve other connections. They do not all have the same evidential strength, or teach the same arts.

Sources: S69 · S53 · S70 · S75 · S76

What is the Nen-ryū lead actually based on?

The 2025 article cites 手継序 transmitted in several Shintō lines, Iizasa Morishige’s 新當流兵法書 in 日本武道大系 volume 3 (1982), and the Shimazu-family 摩利支天大根本巻 attributed to 澤永存 and addressed to 義辰. Its interpretation links Iizasa’s tradition with 中古之念流 / 奥山之念阿弥. Originals were not inspected; the cited Tenshō 23 date needs explanation. This is not proof of personal lessons from Nen’ami Jion.

Sources: S82

Which new links must not be silently merged?

Keep Arai/Kosuge as a proposed identity, the two Arikawa entries as an unresolved comparison, and Shōan’s kinship separate from instruction. Tamiya Bokuden Nyūdō in the Kōfu tradition is not automatically Tsukahara Bokuden. Learning a named school does not prove meeting its founder.

Sources: S53 · S70 · S76 · S81 · S83

Was every research proposal included?

Both research folders were reconciled: 21 proposals from the first review and 36 from the early-network review. Supported and attributed relationships are in the graph. The direct Iizasa → Hayashizaki claim remains excluded; deferred names and unread sources remain explicit research leads. The downloadable research data includes the 57-row integration audit.

Sources: S57 · S59 · S62 · S63 · S65 · S66 · S82

Which names remain outside the teaching diagram?

The remaining Hirosaki names 常井喜兵衛直則 and 浅利伊兵衛均禄, Kamiizumi Magoshirō, Hada/Nagano Kurōbei, Numazawa Nagamasa, and Yamakawa's reported pupils Inui Zenpei and Yamada Tomenoshin remain named research leads. Tani is already represented with source-specific spelling. The 1621 scroll has no surviving addressee; unread papers, uninspected museum images, literature and anonymous forum claims do not supply missing teachers.

Further Nordic records

Urban Aldenklint names Michioka among his iai teachers. The May 1983 Swedish federation minutes identify Michioka, Watanabe and Masahiro Konno as examiners at the Stockholm grading. The annual report records the Finnish visit; a Finnish retrospective specifically includes Konno. These records add teaching and event connections without making every candidate a personal disciple.

Sources: S58 · S15 · S16 · S68

Corrections and retained uncertainties

Michioka's death year is qualified: the club history gives 1997, while the Swedish retrospective includes both 1995 and 1997. His kanji, and those of Iwamoto and Watanabe, remain unverified. The Yokohama Kōbukai source link has been corrected. Petri H. Lunden and all previously supplied Swedish teaching relationships are retained.

Sources: S1 · S20 · S36 · S49

Do not infer a direct Iizasa connection

A modern narrative associates Hayashizaki with Iizasa Chōisai, but Katori City dates Iizasa's death to 1488, before Hayashizaki's putative 1542 birth. That direct teacher–student arrow is excluded. Divine-origin traditions and technical resemblance are also not turned into human teaching certificates.

Sources: S8 · S65 · S66 · S60

Before Hayashizaki / reading the earlier network

The main connected diagram, focused atlas view and poster sheet 5 bring together 17 existing entries and their 17 relationships. They include earlier traditions, proposed teachers and related pupils or contemporaries; not every person lived before Hayashizaki. No new direct teacher is inferred simply to fill a gap.

Possible route, with separate evidence at each step

Nen-related tradition → Iizasa → Tsukahara Yasumoto → Bokuden → Hayashizaki is a research route assembled from different sources. It is not a verified unbroken chain. The Nen link is possible school transmission or influence; Iizasa's pupils come from a problematic historical summary; the last two arrows are school accounts.

Sources: S82 · S72 · S51 · S73 · S71

Two routes into Bokuden and the other pupils

Urabe / Yoshikawa Akikata is named as Bokuden's biological father and teacher. Tsukahara Yasumoto is named as an adoptive father and teacher in the school account, while other histories give an intervening Yasushige generation. Matsumoto's position also varies. Ibaraki's heritage account names six additional Bokuden pupils: Ashikaga Yoshiteru, Ashikaga Yoshiaki, Hosokawa Yūsai, Kitabatake Tomonori, Morooka Ippa and Matsuoka Hyōgonosuke.

Sources: S51 · S73 · S74

What does not establish a teacher

No supported earlier teacher of Higashine was identified. Shōan is reported as Hayashizaki's uncle and Katayama's teacher, but this does not make him Hayashizaki's teacher. Ōno's Kurama-ryū link remains genealogy context. Iizasa's death in 1488 excludes direct instruction of Hayashizaki, whose putative birth is c. 1542.

Sources: S50 · S81 · S80 · S52 · S66

Transmission texts behind the Nen research lead

A 2025 Japanese article cites 手継序, Iizasa Morishige's 新當流兵法書 in 日本武道大系 第3巻 (1982), and the Shimazu-family 摩利支天大根本巻 attributed to 澤永存, addressed to 義辰. It interprets passages about 中古之念流 and 奥山之念阿弥 as evidence of an earlier Nen-related tradition.

The cited originals were not inspected. The quoted Tenshō 23 dating needs explanation. This card represents a textual research lead, not proof of Nen'ami Jion personally teaching Iizasa or a verified chain to Hayashizaki.

02 / Established research questions

Who taught Watanabe directly?

Iwamoto, then Michioka, are explicit in Kensei's account. The retrospective Swedish history may also mean Ōmura taught Watanabe directly, but its wording is ambiguous.

Sources: S1 · S20

Why do some charts count 16, others 18?

The extra Tsubouchi and Shimamura entries change the count. Takada and Seimeikai also reverse the Tsubouchi–Shimomura order. Kan'ōkan places names in paired rows. Choose a genealogy version to see each serial account while retaining their differences.

Sources: S5 · S27 · S30 · S44

Is there a single successor after Nakayama?

The reviewed sources document multiple teaching branches. This atlas records relationships rather than assigning a universal sōke office. A person can have more than one teacher.

Sources: S27 · S31 · S36 · S37

Did Watanabe found all three Swedish clubs?

The public records distinguish the Japanese association, Swedish teaching, and local club founding. Honto names four local founders; Kensei's account credits Mike with starting Linköping's iai. A shared teacher does not make these founding events identical.

Sources: S1 · S9

Do international connections mean Kensei branches?

The 1983 Turku seminar is documented. Igarashi's group attended Ōmura's dojo. Neither establishes another permanent Kensei organization. The Finnish Takada association follows a separately documented MSR branch.

Sources: S16 · S17 · S42

Which new arrows still need stronger evidence?

The reported layer contains Ōmura → Watanabe and additional teachers of Ishido Sadataro. To strengthen them, inspect the cited 1979 directory and obtain clearer lineage testimony. No licence certificate has been reconstructed or invented.

03 / Entry register

Every current atlas card appears below. Optional reported cards remain qualified. Names and kanji are not silently standardized when the sources disagree.

Early iai tradition

Hayashizaki Jinsuke Shigenobu · 林崎甚助重信

Traditional origin; born c. 1542; death uncertain

Traditional common ancestor of this iai family. A 1716 printed historical work, known here through a later transcription, discusses Hayashizaki and Tamiya. This is later evidence about earlier lives. Further accounts name Higashine and report a Bokuden connection; no secure teacher-of-Higashine chain was found. Kurama-ryū preserves another tradition. These remain qualified in the optional reported layer.

Dates: c. 1542–?

Limit: The 1542 birth year is uncertain even in the National Diet Library authority record. Founding legends are not contemporary documentation. A direct Iizasa Chōisai link is excluded: Katori City dates Iizasa's death to 1488, before Hayashizaki's putative birth.

Tamiya Heibei Narimasa · 田宮平兵衛業正

Also Shigemasa; historical spellings vary

Named as Hayashizaki's pupil in the historical text transcribed by the Niigata iai researchers. Narimasa and Shigemasa appear in different modern tables.

Sources: S18 · S3 · S4

Nagano Muraku Kinrōsai · 長野無楽入道

Traditional third position

The Niigata study also identifies Nagano as Tamiya's pupil. The subsequent early sequence is retained as traditional genealogy.

Sources: S18 · S3 · S4

Momo Gunbei Mitsushige · 百々軍兵衛光重

Also Momō / Momono; traditional transmission

A named link in the shared traditional genealogy used by Eishin-ryū and Shinden-ryū schools.

Limit: The chart does not turn a repeated genealogy into proof of an exclusive headmaster office. Exact dates and some name readings remain unresolved.

Banno Dan’emon Nobusada · 万野団右衛門信定

Also Manno; traditional transmission

A named link in the shared traditional genealogy used by Eishin-ryū and Shinden-ryū schools.

Limit: The chart does not turn a repeated genealogy into proof of an exclusive headmaster office. Exact dates and some name readings remain unresolved.

Sources: S3 · S4

Hasegawa Chikaranosuke Eishin · 長谷川主税助英信

Eishin-ryū ancestral teaching line

The Eishin name anchors the ancestral teaching tradition. Later MSR inherits Eishin material through Tosa; MSR’s modern name should not be projected unchanged onto this early period. Enomoto’s North Shinano study distinguishes Hasegawa’s yawara from the iai attributed to Tamiya Yahei; the conventional iai sequence remains separately visible.

Limit: The chart does not turn a repeated genealogy into proof of an exclusive headmaster office. Exact dates and some name readings remain unresolved. The North Shinano reconstruction is not silently merged with the conventional chart.

Sources: S3 · S4 · S53

Arai Seitetsu Kiyonobu · 荒井勢哲清信

Also Seishin / Seitetsu; readings vary

A named link in the shared traditional genealogy used by Eishin-ryū and Shinden-ryū schools. Enomoto (1994, pp. 25–26) proposes identification with Kosuge Seitetsusai Masatsugu and a different iai/yawara transmission background.

Limit: The Arai/Kosuge identification and the alternate transmission are Enomoto’s interpretation, not an uncontested identity or a universal school correction.

Sources: S3 · S4 · S53

Hayashi Rokudayū Morimasa · 林六太夫守政

Tosa transmission; also learned Ōmori material

Associated with the Tosa transmission and incorporation of Ōmori material. The separate Ōmori arrow shows a curricular source alongside the main genealogy.

Limit: The chart does not turn a repeated genealogy into proof of an exclusive headmaster office. Exact dates and some name readings remain unresolved.

Hayashi Yasudayū · 林安太夫

Seishō / Masatomo and kanji variants; see notes

A named link in the shared traditional genealogy used by Eishin-ryū and Shinden-ryū schools.

Common junction in conventional genealogies

The conventional junction before the lines later called Shimomura-ha and Tanimura-ha. These labels simplify a broader network; they are useful orientation, not evidence that teaching was restricted to two exclusive chains.

Limit: The chart does not turn a repeated genealogy into proof of an exclusive headmaster office. Exact dates and some name readings remain unresolved.

Higashine Gyōbu-dayū · 東根刑部太夫

Reported early teacher of Hayashizaki

A modern Shiga federation narrative names him as an early teacher. His own teachers remain unidentified in the inspected evidence.

Limit: No contemporary transmission record was located; visible only with reported links.

Sources: S50

Tsukahara Bokuden · 塚原卜伝

Hayashizaki connection · explicit school tradition

Hayashizaki Musō-ryū explicitly attributes Ichi-no-tachi instruction to Bokuden. His own school names two teachers; other histories disagree on intervening generations.

Limit: Later school testimony; not an independently inspected contemporary licence.

Urabe (reading unconfirmed) · 卜部覚賢

Bokuden’s biological father and teacher

Kashima’s account names Urabe 覚賢 as a teacher. Ibaraki’s heritage page gives the name Yoshikawa Akikata 吉川覚賢.

Limit: Name-reading variants remain; this is attributed historical testimony.

Sources: S51 · S74

Tsukahara Tosa-no-kami Yasumoto · 塚原土佐守安幹

Bokuden’s teacher · generations disputed

Kashima Shintō-ryū calls him Bokuden’s adoptive father and teacher. Other histories call him an adoptive grandfather, with Yasushige between them.

Limit: Preserve the disagreement. Iizasa instruction is provisional.

Ōno Shōgen · 大野将監

Kurama-ryū tradition · relationship unresolved

Shūseikan places Ōno and Hayashizaki in a compressed Kurama-ryū genealogy. The atlas records a shared tradition, not a verified direct lesson.

Limit: The school reports that early documents were lost in the 1945 fire. Precise intervening relationships remain unresolved.

Sources: S52

Tamiya Yahei Nobumasa · 田宮彌兵衛信正

Hitachi teacher in Enomoto’s interpretation

Enomoto’s 1994 study interprets the transmission behind the conventional Arai entry as involving iai from this Hitachi teacher, and yawara from Hasegawa.

Limit: Do not merge this person with Tamiya Heibei. This is an attributed alternative reconstruction, not a replacement of every school’s genealogy.

MJER branch continues separately

A related MJER branch. Its presence explains the shared ancestry in the supplied MJER charts; it does not make Ōe an obligatory teacher between Morimoto and Nakayama.

Tsubouchi Seisuke Nagazumi · 坪内清助長順

Position differs between school tables

Morimoto's diary study identifies him as Shimamura Umanojō's teacher. School tables disagree over his serial position relative to Shimomura Moichi.

Limit: Sources use 清助 and 清作; the conventional display name is retained. Do not resolve the serial genealogy solely from the diagram.

Shimamura Umanojō · 嶋村右馬允義郷

Tsubouchi and Yamakawa pupil · diary study

Morimoto's diary study says he entered Tsubouchi's school in 1826 and also received Yamakawa's instruction. It identifies his son Zenba as Hosokawa Yoshimasa.

Limit: The 2023 conference abstract and the expanded article share one author. The original diaries were not independently inspected. Family relationship is shown as context, not proof of transmission.

Shimomura Emori · 下村衛守

Yamakawa pupil · diary-based research

Morimoto's Japanese abstract identifies him as Yamakawa's pupil and records contact with Shimamura Umanojō.

Limit: Distinct from Shimomura Moichi. Contact is not itself evidence that he was Shimamura's personal teacher.

Nonomura Chōzaemon · 野々村長左衛門

Recipient named in an attributed 1860 scroll

A private collector publishes a Hasegawa-ryū song scroll attributed to Shimomura Moichi, addressed to this recipient in 1860.

Limit: Underlying object and identity are not independently authenticated. Do not merge with earlier famous Nonomura swordsmen.

Nakayama's circle

Nakayama Hakudō · 中山博道

Musō Shinden-ryū · two Tosa teachers

The central meeting point of the two Tosa iai routes. His pupil Ōmura's 1968 article describes the Hosokawa connection and a public demonstration under the MSR name in May 1933. His other sword training and his many students form additional branches.

Dates: d. 1958

Limit: No universal "next sōke" is assigned. Published genealogies number Nakayama differently; birth years and licence narratives also conflict.

Ōmura Yūji · 大村唯次

Nakayama's pupil · Yūshin dojo

Ōmura's Japanese article is especially valuable because he writes as a participant. Igarashi independently recalls iai practice at his dojo.

Limit: Romanizations include Yūji, Yuiji and Tadaji. Kensei and Igarashi differ about the dojo's ward. The identity is anchored by 大村唯次.

S1 · Kensei: History

English · Club account

Principal account of the modern teaching relationships; undated page, accessed 28 October 2026. Some study visits listed end in 2024. This is testimony from the lineage, not independent archival verification of every link.

Open source ↗

S2 · Kensei: Klubben

Swedish · Club roster

Lists Mike Henry, Björn Stille, Amanda Gydemo-Östbom and Magnus Erkstam as instructors; identifies the honbu in Kawagoe. Accessed 28 October 2026; page may contain older ranks.

Open source ↗

S3 · Nihon Kobudō Kyōkai: Musō Jikiden Eishin-ryū

Japanese · School association genealogy

Used for the shared traditional sequence through Ōguro and for the Tanimura branch. This is an MJER school account, not proof that Kensei belongs to its modern succession.

Open source ↗

S4 · Didier Boyet: Musō Shinden-ryū lineage

French / Japanese · Practitioner genealogy

Provides all 16 conventional positions through Nakayama and name variants. Dates and some kanji differ from Japanese sources; used as a comparative lineage table.

Open source ↗

S5 · Ōmura: 夢想神伝流居合について (1968), p. 29

Japanese · Primary participant account

Article by 大村唯次, Research Journal of Budō 1(1), 25 December 1968. Describes Yamakawa → Shimomura → Hosokawa → Nakayama, speaks as a pupil, and places a public demonstration under the MSR name in May 1933. Full one-page PDF read; Japanese text recovered from its legacy encoding.

Open source ↗

S6 · Shikoku Iaido Federation: history of Eishin-ryū

Japanese · Federation historical account

Explains Ōmori material, the two later branch labels, and Nakayama’s study of both lines. Warns that the two-branch division simplifies a wider teaching network.

Open source ↗

S7 · 長谷川英信流伝系図

Japanese · Compiled genealogy

Names the sequence on both sides and Gotō → Morimoto → Nakayama. Lists underlying genealogies and Tosa family records, but these manuscripts were not inspected independently. Gives variants such as Matsuyoshi Hisamori.

Open source ↗

S8 · NDL authority: Hayashizaki Shigenobu

Japanese · Library authority record

Catalogues the birth date as 1542?; supports retaining uncertainty instead of the exact dates on several supplied charts.

Open source ↗

S9 · Honto: Om Honto

Swedish · Club history

Names four local founders on 11 November 1998; describes present membership of Swedish Kensei Kensan Kai and guidance from Watanabe’s closest students. Also records Mattias Jansson’s earlier Honto membership.

Open source ↗

S10 · Honto annual report 2024, pp. 5-6

Swedish · Contemporary organizational record

Explicitly records the three-club collaboration and Leif Sunje’s two weeks as Watanabe’s uchideshi in May 2024. Full PDF retrieved; relevant pages read.

Open source ↗

S11 · Honto annual report 2025, pp. 5-8, 12

Swedish · Contemporary organizational record

Published for the 2026 meeting. Records current iaido instructors and assistants, continued Kensei/Linköping cooperation, and a 2026 continuation plan. PDF downloaded directly from the club when the web viewer could not open it.

Open source ↗

S12 · Honto: current iaido instructors

Swedish · Club roster

Lists Leif Sunje, Björn Hendil Forssell, Anna Thelander, Oskar Boeryd and Tomas Zaar. Ranks on this page lag the 2025 report for some members, so ranks are omitted from this lineage.

Open source ↗

S13 · Linköpings Budoklubb: Iaido

Swedish · Club page

Confirms active iaido practice; page text retrieved did not name the instructors. Instructor names in this research instead use S1 and the federation contact record S14.

Open source ↗

S14 · European Kendo Federation: Linköping dojo

English · Federation directory

Identifies Caroline Lindholm as the iaido contact. Confirms a current organizational role; not a transmission certificate.

Open source ↗

S15 · Swedish federation minutes, 28 May 1983, appendix 3

Swedish · Contemporary archive

PDF page 4 records Michioka, Watanabe and Konno as judges on 22 May 1983, and Mike Henry and Roger Undhagen among those passing shodan. Confirms contact, not the full teaching lineage by itself.

Open source ↗

S16 · Swedish federation annual report 1983

Swedish · Contemporary archive

Confirms Michioka and Watanabe's visit, a public demonstration in Stockholm, and a seminar in Turku, Finland. A seminar is not evidence of a permanent Finnish Kensei branch.

Open source ↗

S17 · Igarashi Kazuo: My Aikido Training Days

English translation · First-person recollection

Recalls training at Ōmura's Yūshin dojo and identifies Ōmura as Nakayama's direct pupil. Romanization is Yuiji. Its dojo-location detail differs from Kensei's account; no address is adopted here.

S18 · 居文研新潟: Tamiya-ryū in iai history

Japanese · Research with historical quotations

Transcribes the Hayashizaki and Tamiya entries from Honchō Bugei Shōden; cites the 1920 edition, p. 94, NDL frame 104. Also identifies Nagano as Tamiya's pupil. The original NDL viewer was not accessible in this search.

Open source ↗

S19 · Aichi University of Education: Honchō Bugei Shōden

Japanese · Rare-book catalogue

Confirms a 1716 printed edition, with a 1714 preface. This verifies publication history, not every lineage statement in the book.

Open source ↗

S20 · Raili Bükk: Swedish iaido history

Swedish · Retrospective history

Broadly agrees with the modern chain. Wording may place Watanabe directly under Ōmura too; this is less explicit than the club's main account. Has a Nakayama/Nakamura name error and an older Swedish roster. Not counted as fully independent corroboration.

Open source ↗

S21 · Reddit r/Koryu: Muso Shinden ryu (2022)

English · Forum discussion

Read for contested founding dates, licences and koryū classification. Participants themselves request evidence. No personal lineage arrow is established solely from forum assertions.

Open source ↗

S22 · Honto: Muso Shinden Ryu curriculum

Swedish / Japanese · Club curriculum

Attributes its syllabus to Kensei Kensan Kai; supports the school affiliation but does not establish individual teacher relationships.

Open source ↗

S23 · Sendai University: 居合道の系譜と普及に関する一考察 (2020), pp. 53-71

Japanese · Academic study, limited access

Relevant indexed excerpts checked, including p. 57 on Nakayama's two teachers. Full download failed with 503/429 errors. Used only as supporting context, not as an independently read full paper.

Open source ↗

S24 · Finnish Musō Shinden-ryū introductory history (2014)

Finnish · Association history

Indexed passage corroborates Michioka's 1983 Turku seminar. Does not identify a continuing Kensei branch.

Open source ↗

S25 · Wandering Budoka: MSR overview

English · Practitioner secondary account

Checked as comparison: discusses both of Nakayama's teachers and differing naming/licence dates. Its specific licence narrative is not treated as settled by this research.

Open source ↗

S26 · Kenzenichi: Nakayama biographical notes

Italian · Comparative secondary chronology

Indexed excerpt gives Ōmura 1894-1980 and entry under Nakayama in 1909. Useful cross-check; not a substitute for a Japanese birth/death record.

Open source ↗

S27 · Takada Dōjō: lineage published in 2009

English · School genealogy

Official dojo blog, attributing the sequence to Takada Gakudō, 31 May 1997. Inserts Tsubouchi and Shimamura; continues through Matsuo to Takada. Its headmaster numbering belongs to this school's account, not all MSR.

Open source ↗

S28 · Kan’ōkan: 無雙神傳英信流抜刀兵法

Japanese · School genealogy

Lists the Ueda–Ogata–Umemoto–Morimoto line. Places Shimomura/Tsubouchi and Hosokawa/Shimamura in paired rows; those rows do not establish a single serial order.

Open source ↗

S29 · Kan’ōkan: 植田平太郎先生 (2017)

Japanese · School research with historical quotations

Quotes a 1934 martial-artist directory: Ueda studied iai with Hosokawa from 1919 and received kaiden in 1923. The original directory was not independently inspected; distinguish quoted evidence from the author’s polemical interpretation.

Open source ↗

S30 · Musō Seimeikai: 私たちが学ぶ夢想神伝流の系譜

Japanese · School genealogy

Lists Yamakawa → Tsubouchi → Shimomura → Shimamura → Hosokawa → Nakayama. The Tsubouchi/Shimomura order differs from Takada’s published table.

Open source ↗

S31 · Musō Seimeikai: Danzaki’s teaching tradition

Japanese · School account

Explicitly identifies Nakayama → Danzaki and Danzaki’s pupil Okino Norimasa as the basis of this association’s practice. The old Kenshūkan closed in 2013; do not confuse it with the present association.

Open source ↗

S32 · Ishido Shizufumi: Shinsa-in no Me, translated profile

English translation · Author profile / federation-hosted document

Profile attached to Ishido’s article identifies his father Sadataro as his iai teacher from 1955. Historical profile, not a current rank register.

Open source ↗

S33 · Budapest Summer Seminar 2026: Kotaro Ishido

English · Contemporary event biography

The organizer’s biography records instruction from grandfather Sadataro and father Shizufumi, iai/jō basics from 1984, and later continued study with Shizufumi. It does not separately date each grandfather-to-grandson iai lesson.

Open source ↗

S34 · Shin Bu Kan Budapest: teaching line

Hungarian · School genealogy

Open source ↗

S35 · Koryū is precisely Iai (2025)

English · Secondary account; underlying register uninspected

Attributes Sadataro's study with Nakayama, Yamatsuta, Danzaki, Ōmura and Kamimoto to the 1979 AJKF senior-rank directory. That directory has not been inspected here. These extra arrows remain reported, not independently verified.

Open source ↗

S36 · Yokohama Kōbukai: iaido instructor's introduction

S39 · Shintō Munen-ryū: the Yūshinkan teaching line

Japanese · School account

Identifies Negishi's Yūshinkan, its continuation by Nakayama, and other students. This is a separate sword tradition, not a replacement for Nakayama's Tosa iai teachers.

Open source ↗

S40 · Stefan Stenudd: Lennart Linder, part 5

Swedish · Participant recollection

Recalls Linder's role bringing Michioka and Watanabe to Sweden. Calls Roger a former Linder pupil in an aikido-centered narrative; the art is not explicit enough to draw an iai transmission arrow.

Open source ↗

S41 · AJKF: official iai manual, historical committees

Japanese · Federation document

Appendix lists the 1969 research committee including Ōmura, Yamatsuta, Kamimoto and Danzaki. Joint committee service is an organizational connection, not teacher–student evidence.

Open source ↗

S42 · Finnish MSR Association: Takada Sensei

English · Association account

Identifies Matsuo as Takada's teacher and Takada as the association's teacher. Start dates differ from its older handbook; this diagram does not resolve that discrepancy.

Open source ↗

S43 · Kan'ōkan: head instructor's biography

Japanese · First-party biography

Identifies Morimoto Kunio's study with Umemoto from 1975 and establishment of Kan'ōkan in 1995 at his teacher's direction.

Open source ↗

S44 · Kan'ōkan Setagaya: transmission table

Japanese · Related school genealogy

Names paired generations around Shimomura/Tsubouchi and Hosokawa/Shimamura. Corroborates a different arrangement from a serial numbered list; not independent of the Kan'ōkan tradition.

Open source ↗
