EARLIER LINKS: EVIDENCE MATTERS

Nen-related tradition → Iizasa is possible school influence from cited transmission texts, not proof of personal instruction by Nen’ami Jion.

Iizasa → Yasumoto / Matsumoto remains provisional; generations and dates disagree. No direct Iizasa → Hayashizaki arrow is claimed.

Bokuden → Hayashizaki is explicit later school testimony. Higashine is reported as an early teacher; his own teachers remain unidentified.

READING ONE CONNECTED DIAGRAM

This first sheet follows the principal Kensei route continuously. The following sheets retain wider pupils, alternate Tosa sequences, regional branches and modern student networks.

The familiar early succession is a traditional genealogy. Each arrow does not establish an independently verified licence or sole successor.

Blue arrows preserve school testimony; amber dashed arrows remain uncertain. Club membership at the bottom uses a dotted affiliation line.

S1 S3 S4 S5 S7 S27 S30

Other named teachers, alternate orders and separate branches remain on the detailed sheets; no exclusive universal succession is assigned.

RESEARCH COVERAGE

134 entries and 197 relationship records are in the full atlas.

57 proposals from both research folders have an explicit disposition.

The source register contains 95 records, including historical research leads and practitioner updates.

Unresolved names remain research leads. Literature, anonymous posts and uninspected originals do not become proven teachers.

Hayashizaki Musō-ryū explicitly attributes instruction to Bokuden. Bokuden's school names his biological father Urabe and adoptive father Tsukahara as teachers. See sheets 1 and 5 for the proposed Iizasa route and disputed generations. No teacher of Higashine was identified.

Ōno and Hayashizaki occur in a Kurama-ryū genealogy; that context is not asserted as direct teaching. Iizasa Chōisai is excluded as a direct teacher because the dates conflict.

S50 S51 S52 S71 S65 S66

02 THE TOSA DIARY NETWORK

Shimomura Emori
下村衛守

Yamakawa → Shimamura and Tsubouchi → Shimamura: instruction identified in Morimoto's diary study. Yamakawa → Shimomura Emori: pupil named in the Japanese abstract. Emori ↔ Shimamura: contact, not a proven direction of teaching.

Shimamura → Hosokawa: father and son, according to the study; family context is not a transmission certificate. The abstract and longer article are by the same researcher. Original diaries were not independently inspected. Tsubouchi appears as 清助 / 清作 in the sources.

S54 S55

03 NORTH SHINANO: AN ALTERNATIVE READING

Tamiya Yahei Nobumasa
田宮彌兵衛信正

Enomoto's 1994 study proposes that the conventional Arai entry corresponds to Kosuge Seitetsusai Masatsugu. It separates iai attributed to Tamiya Yahei from yawara attributed to Hasegawa.

Tamiya Yahei → Arai/Kosuge is an attributed interpretation. Yahei is not merged with Tamiya Heibei. The detailed traditional spine on sheet 2 remains visible, with this disagreement recorded in the atlas and report.

S53

04 COLLATERAL MANUSCRIPT RECORDS

Ichinomiya Sadaiyū Terunobu
一宮左太夫照信

Nonomura Chōzaemon
野々村長左衛門

Iwami catalogue GK789-54: Nagano → Ichinomiya. GK789-59 instead places Ichinomiya after Tamiya and omits Nagano. These are differing listed sequences, not two proven personal teachers.

A collector attributes an 1860 scroll from Shimomura Moichi to Nonomura Chōzaemon. The catalogue and public images were examined, not the original objects. Nonomura's identity remains unresolved.

S56 S57 S62

05 FURTHER NORDIC CONNECTIONS

Urban Aldenklint

Masahiro Konno

Stockholm iai grading · 1983

Michioka → Urban Aldenklint: iai study named in Aldenklint's personal account. This does not assert Kensei membership or a licence. The 1983 Stockholm grading names Michioka, Watanabe and Konno as examiners.

Konno also participated in the Turku visit. Being an examiner is not evidence of teaching every candidate. Michioka's death year remains disputed: Kensei says 1997; a Swedish retrospective contains both 1995 and 1997.

S58 S15 S16 S20 S68

06 WHAT IS STILL OPEN

The publicly described 1621 Kamiizumi scroll has a missing recipient. No new certain personal connection is drawn from it. The privately held 1860 object and the underlying Iwami scrolls still need direct examination.

Tanaka's articles, the Yamagata library bibliography and Tsukioka archive provide specific next steps. Several are catalogue-only or unread. Technical resemblance in comparative research does not itself prove a teacher-student relationship.

Possible route: Iizasa → Yasumoto → Bokuden → Hayashizaki. The last step is explicit school testimony; the first relies on a problematic historical summary. Other accounts differ over Yasumoto, Yasushige and Matsumoto. No verified unbroken chain is claimed.

Nen-related influence → Iizasa is a textual research lead, not Jion’s proven personal tuition. Cited texts: Tetsugijo; Iizasa Morishige’s Shintō-ryū text (Nihon Budō Taikei 3); Shimazu-family Marishiten scroll. Originals and the unusual Tenshō 23 date need checking.

Shōan → Hayashizaki indicates reported uncle-nephew kinship only. Hayashizaki → Katayama is not established. Learning Bokuden-ryū does not mean meeting Bokuden himself.

READ THESE ROUTES WITH THEIR LIMITS

Nen-related tradition is a textual research lead, not proof that Nen’ami Jion personally taught Iizasa.

Iizasa’s death in 1488 excludes a direct lesson to Hayashizaki (putative birth c. 1542).

Some accounts insert Yasushige or differ over Matsumoto. No verified unbroken chain is asserted.

02 BOKUDEN’S OTHER REPORTED PUPILS

Ibaraki’s heritage account names six further pupils. They provide swordsmanship context; they are not all ancestors in Kensei’s iai succession.
